MISSOURI STEAM WASHER,

Paying $5 on same, and agreeing to pay the other $5 or return the machine and have the $5 he advanced returned within thirty days. The result you can read from his own pen.

EMANUEL CHURCH,
Webster Groves, June 11, 1884.
JOHNSTON BROTHERS:

Dear Sirs—I take great pleasure in sending you the other $5 for the Washer. I do not want thirty days' trial. So perfectly satisfied am I with one day's trial that no money would induce me to part with my machine if I could not get another. The girl did the whole wash, which formerly took all day, in just two and a half hours; did not rub a piece, and the clothes are far whiter than they were with tub and board. Mr. Ferris is a blessing to womankind, and I sincerely hope he will make a million dollars from his invention.

Sincerely yours,
C. E. D. GRIFFITH.

McNICHOLS' LIGHT—IT SHINES FOR ALL IN THE DARK!

Nothing makes man's heart so light as good fortune in a trade. They who start about it right find their household fortunes made. For McNichols' light to shine, not to size and take your place. Leave to him your weight of care. Use can make the measure false. Rumble though your lot may be, and your collar bare and blank, Mac can make your sorrow less. And you pay him by the week.

Now I see the letters shine. One man's famous name in gold. Rich and useful things are mine. For he sells on time, I'm told.

McNichols is a house to any city, country or township. He can make waste places green with verdure and cattle. Shows where before all was darkness and old house-hair poles. Bacon, codfish, rice, etc.

BEN BUTLER'S BAZOO.

The Political Devil-Fish After Another Presidential Nomination.

While He Doesn't Say So Directly It Is Evident He Thinks Nobody but Ben Butler Can Beat Blaine—He Talks About Cleveland.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.
New York, June 17.—"Are you willing to give your views of the political situation, General," asked a reporter of Gen. Benjamin F. Butler at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday.

"I do not know that they will be of interest to anybody," was the answer, "but I know no reason why I should conceal them."

Reporter—What do you think of the nomination of Mr. Blaine?

Gen. Butler—I gave my views on this subject the day after his nomination. It is the strongest nomination that could have been made, as it has turned out.

Reporter—But there seems to be a great number of bolters?

Gen. Butler—More apparent than real. I can remember when Mr. Webster said of Taylor's nomination by the Whig party, "It is a nomination not fit to be made," which was true, but the popular enthusiasm carried him through and the bolters were whipped in before election. In Massachusetts 40,000 Republicans left the party in 1878 and 1880 and voted independently, but they were not the so-called Independents of to-day. Their action was a protest against the rule of the Republican party, which was then substantially under the control of the men who now back Mr. Blaine's nomination, and James Freeman Clarke and Charles Francis Adams and their co-workers now having repudiated the regular nominations of the party in most contingencies will return to Mr. Blaine, certainly, rather than vote for anybody that those men should support by whatsoever party nominated.

Reporter—But is not New York the battle ground?

Gen. Butler—Yes, and the neighboring States of Connecticut and New Jersey. In New York this curious political condition arose. In 1880 60,000 Republicans voted for the Democratic candidate for Governor, and so many Republicans stayed at home that he was elected by the enormous majority of 190,000, but with the rule of the Republican party, which was then substantially under the control of the men who now back Mr. Blaine's nomination, and James Freeman Clarke and Charles Francis Adams and their co-workers now having repudiated the regular nominations of the party in most contingencies will return to Mr. Blaine, certainly, rather than vote for anybody that those men should support by whatsoever party nominated.

Reporter—Who do you think can carry the State of New York?

Gen. Butler—Pardon me, it would neither be profitable nor proper for me to make prophecies. It would neither be interesting nor valuable, but if you desire I will state a few facts. The Governor felt it his duty as a matter of administration to veto the bill which enacted five cent fares on the Elevated Railroad. That involved a very large amount of money to be taken from the middle and lower classes, who principally use the railroad every year, as you will see, when the statistics show that 9,000,000 people are carried yearly on these roads. The veto securing to the railroad ten cents fare instead of five cents each, making a sum of $4,500,000 yearly. After the veto had stopped there, the anti-monopolists which they never before had; but the ground on which the veto was based was certainly not Democratic, and that there was no constitutional power in one legislature to regulate and abridge privileges granted by a former legislature to a public agency, however oppressive these privileges had become. Again it has been said that the legislature had passed a bill, with the approval of the Governor, taking from the Aldermen, chosen by the people, the power of selecting or confirming the appointments of city officers, and that confined to the city of New York alone, apparently as a punishment applied to that city because it gave Democratic majorities. The Constitution of the United States and of every State in the Union, framed by our Democratic fathers, have placed the control of the appointment of officers in the hands of a part of the legislative body, and the same rule has been applied substantially in all the cities. The officers of the City of New York have more important duties and have larger emoluments than the officers of most States in the Union. If our fathers were right in the bill is not Democratic, but favors the one-man power. That the example was immediately adopted to be copied in regard to the city of Boston by the Massachusetts Legislature, with a two-thirds Republican majority, emphasizes this construction. If the Democracy will permit the Republicans, bolting or regular, to nominate its candidate for President for it, why may not this principle be carried through all branches of our government? Again, Mr. Blaine is a protectionist, and New York has become the largest manufacturing State in the Union, and Connecticut and New Jersey are in population equally interested in the tariff question. Now, everybody knows that upon that question Gen. Hancock was beaten in New York, and everybody also knows that the establishment of free trade in this country would benefit England and her dependencies more than all other countries in the world. It will be very difficult to convince a large class of our citizens, especially those who are not at all in love with England or her institutions, or her treatment of Ireland, that it is best to vote for the candidate of the Democratic party in favor of free trade, and thus to play into the hands of our old enemy, John Bull. Is it not an admitted fact?

But to carry New York is necessary to the success of the Democratic party? Can anybody who cannot reconcile all the differences between the party in New York and who will be open to local antagonism, carry the State, however greater his qualifications may be? Success at the coming election is not only the duty of the Democracy, but an indispensable necessity, for failing to carry the election this year gives four more years of power to the Republicans, and under a bold and daring leader of great ability, large resources and agile policy, who has shown more political sagacity, and who, by his untiring efforts, has wielded more political power than any other man of the present generation, the party will so instruct itself in possession of the Governor that its hold upon the nation cannot be overthrown, in this generation at least, if at all. It will be done by some new party of the people, rising from the debris of the present political organizations, more radical, more progressive, and more devoted to the interests of the whole people against the aggression of the few. This will be the true Democracy, which will make no enduring alliances with the "mammon of unrighteousness."

ANOTHER BLAINE DESERTER.

Rev. C. S. Smith, a Prominent Colored Orator and Agitator to Support Butler.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

Bloomington, Ill., July 17.—Rev. C. S. Smith, the colored orator who created quite a stir in the Republican State Convention at Peoria, and at a Republican meeting held in Chicago a short time before, announces that he will not support Blaine and Logan, and has come out for Ben Butler. Smith is one of the foremost colored orators of the country, and a man whom Fred Douglass said was destined to be a leader of the colored race, and whose name is causing no small commotion in State politics. His friends have been expecting, or rather hoping, that his fiery and impassioned eloquence would do much in the various parts of the country towards the success of the Republican party during the approaching election.

BISHOP SIMPSON GROWING WEAKER.

The Bishop of New York is growing weaker.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, June 17.—The Bishop of New York, John T. McCloskey, is growing weaker, and it is expected that he will soon resign his office. The Bishop has been suffering from ill health for some time, and his condition is becoming more serious. It is believed that he will not be able to perform his duties for some time, and that he will soon be forced to resign. The Bishop's resignation would be a great loss to the Catholic Church in New York, as he has been one of its most prominent leaders and supporters.

A DUDE ON A DRUNK.

The Experience of Mr. John Harves, a Mysterious Dude, in a Police Court.

His patent-leather-cream-colored-top shoes were carefully stored, as John Harves, a dude, who resides at No. 101 West 10th street, told the jury in the First District Police Court this morning to answer a charge of being drunk on the street. Ellen Shaughnessy, an old-timer, had just given the court a parting blast when the young man who said his name was "Jawn Harves," slipped out of the dock and disappeared. The jury, however, evidently regret that it wasn't of even more generous proportions that it might cover him completely. His coat was soiled with mud, and he was evidently uncomfortable for sitting down or sudden changes of position. His coat was muddled out of service a little while before the jury came in. In the morning breeze fluttered and kissed off a point about the neck of the coat, and the jury, with a suggestive nod, pronounced him drunk.

His ten-story collar looked like an old cuff on duty.

...pering fingers of his left hand were gracefully drawn across the bridge of his nose, but on being

The first new "extra" wheat of the crop of 1904 was received here to-day, and was sold at auction to the George P. Plant Milling Company at $1.11 per bush.

This firm carry the honors for first purchases of wheat received in this market, having been at purchasers for years past. In this connection may be stated that this enterprising company, so well known in this city—since 1868—was that of Louis with the final completion of the largest and grandest piece of milling property known anywhere in the west. It is the new plant of the Victor and its Roller "A" mills will commence on their daily output of flour in the city of St. Louis. The new plant have to wait on them, but will receive shipments of their justly celebrated brands of flour, such as the "Victor" and "Favorite" roller flour.

the record. The liquor dealers will therefore be required to pay the June collection tax under the new law, leaving the matter open for further test before the courts.

Pulled Out in Time.
KILWATER, W. Va. 17.—George P. Sanborn was appointed receiver of the Manufacturers' bank, which has failed. Liabilities, about $40,000; assets nominally $500,000, but they cannot realize more than $200,000. Outside pay will scarcely pay 30 cents on the dollar. President Curren has accepted his promise to see all the debts paid. No other banks are affected. Many business houses are troubled. The only heavy fortunes were fortunate in having drawn out their funds before the bank failed. The bank of this city and bank was shaky. The Lake Shore and Western Illinois Company had just withdrawn $700,000 in deposits.

A Barn Burned.
Tulip to the east—Dennis.

HEMSTVILLE, LL., June 17.—Daniel Gallagher's smooth barn, fourteen miles south of here, containing a horse and a mule, farm implements, a very wagon, oats, corn and hay, were yesterday morning destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,000; the horse and mule saved. The loss is $2,000; partially insured.
